Chicago Fire FC Acquires $100,000 in General Allocation Money, Selects Defender/Midfielder Jonathan Jimenez

Chicago Fire FC today acquired $100,000 in General Allocation Money from the New York Red Bulls in exchange for its No. 10 overall pick in the 2020 MLS SuperDraft, presented by adidas. With the 26th pick in the first round, Chicago selected defender/midfielder Jonathan Jimenez.

Jimenez joins the Fire from the University of the Pacific, where he started all 21 games in which he appeared from 2018-2019, recording eight goals and five assists. In 2018, Jimenez scored the first hat trick in Pacific's modern era when he tallied three times in three minutes to lead the Tigers to a 3-2 comeback win against No. 11-ranked University of Portland. Additionally, in 2018, four of Jimenez's goals were game winners, including one against Stanford which was the first loss for the defending national champions in nearly a year.

Prior to joining the Tigers, Jimenez played in 29 games (starting 28) for Seton Hall University from 2016-2017, recording four goals and nine assists. The Florida native was named to the Big East All-Freshman team in 2016.

Name: Jonathan Jimenez

Position: Defender/Midfielder

Height: 5'11"

Weight: 176 lbs.

Date of Birth: December 17, 1997

Hometown: Cape Coral, Fla.

Citizenship: United States of America

Chicago Fire FC Names Ben Donachie Director of Performance

Chicago Fire FC announced today that the Club has hired Ben Donachie as Director of Performance. He will join the Fire upon receipt of his work visa.

Donachie joins the Fire after spending the past eight seasons (2012-19) as the lead Strength and Conditioning Coach for English Premier League club AFC Bournemouth. While working with Bournemouth, Donachie was responsible for overseeing the strength development and rehabilitation of the club's first team and academy players.

"Ben has worked with players at the highest level in world football," said Chicago Fire FC Sporting Director Georg Heitz. "His expertise in sports performance will play an important role in the development of our first team and academy players. We look forward to having him join our technical staff. We welcome Ben and his family to Chicago."

During Donachie's tenure with his previous club, Bournemouth earned promotion twice in three seasons. In 2013, Bournemouth was promoted to the Football League Championship, returning to the second highest league in England for the first time since 1990. In 2015, Bournemouth clinched its first-ever promotion to the English Premier League.

"After speaking with Georg and Raphael, it didn't take long for me to decide that I wanted to come on board," said Donachie. "Their vision for this incredible Club is very motivating and it's an exciting time to join the Fire. I can't wait to get started."

Donachie graduated from Bournemouth University in 2008 with a Bachelor of Science honors degree in exercise science. He also earned a Master of Science degree in sport and exercise science from the University of Glasgow.

Chicago will kick off its 2020 MLS season on the road on Sunday, March 1 against defending MLS Cup Champions Seattle Sounders FC at CenturyLink Field at 2:00 p.m. CT (ESPN). The Fire will officially make its return to Soldier Field on Saturday, March 21 when the team hosts Atlanta United FC in its 2020 home opener at 2:30 p.m. CT (Univision).

Fans can secure a seat for the Fire's 2020 MLS home opener, or any home game of the regular season, through a variety of ticket packages. Beginning as low as $15 per game, season ticket packages for the 2020 campaign are available for purchase online or by calling 888-MLS-FIRE to speak with a season ticket sales representative. Additionally, season tickets for children ages 12-and-under are also currently available for as low as $12.50 per game.

Five top under-the-radar signings in MLS this offseason

The SuperDraft is done, which means we are now into the home-stretch heart of the winter transfer wonderland, a joyous carnival of gorging on reports and speculation that even results in some actual signings along the way.

Predictably, our dumb brains are wired to spend most of our primary transfer window energy kicking about things like the chase for famed Designated Player captures (it's a real thing, you don't need to look it up). That clinically-proven scientific fact actually acts as cover for several players to land stateside a bit under the radar, and some of those guys will shine.

To wit: It was on the relative down-low when New York City FC lured Ismael Tajouri-Shradi and Anton Tinnerholm to MLS two winters ago, but they've surprised many by providing a ton of impact since then.

Obviously, that was all a setup for us to shine a light on the best "sneaky-good" signings of the offseason thus far. There's a lot of defensive ability in this group, and four of the five are headed to Eastern Conference clubs. As with any self-respecting list, there are a few honorable mentions worth note: Francisco Ginella (LAFC), Danny Musovski (LAFC) and Miguel Nazarit (Nashville SC).

No. 5: Alvaro Medran, Chicago Fire FC

This 25-year-old freebie has 77 La Liga games under his belt and enough talent to have scored a UEFA Champions League goal for Real Madrid, but never fully blossomed at the four Spanish top-flight stops that came after he left the Bernabeu.

Teams have mostly used Medran as a No. 8, but he might fare better nudged slightly up the pitch. If the Fire can fit the proper defensive personnel behind him and create upfront chances like they did last season, the 25-year-old could emerge as an Osorio-like attack supplement.

No. 4: Vito Wormgoor, Columbus Crew SC

This shrewd Columbus signing (pictured at top) was obscured a bit by other moves made by his own new team (Darlington Nagbe a month earlier and Lucas Zelarayan two days later). Wormgoor is an Ajax youth product center back and plays like one.

He's quite proactive defensively, jumping pass lanes and sliding the ball away from dribblers with good technique. He's also solid in the air and will pick out well-weighted long diagonals all day.

No. 3: Tom Petterson, FC Cincinnati

For as much help as FCC need at the back after leaking a league-record 75 goals last season, one might have thought there'd be more notice of Petterson coming on board. He's a highly mobile central defender who speed-reads the direction of opposing attack moves and can even ably cover left back in a pinch.

The Swede is sturdy in the box, but makes better stops on the run. And like Wormgoor, he hits a sweet diagonal ball from the back.

No. 2: Thiago Santos, FC Dallas

Oh, FC Dallas fans are going to love the veteran defensive midfielder. Thiago Santos is a relentless ball-hawk, but he's not your typical gatekeeper. The Palmeiras transplant loves to use his closing speed and verve to break up opposing rushes before they even get started.

This quirk will see him force loads of turnovers across midfield, giving his teammates a much shorter counter road to hoe towards goal. Of course he's Brazilian, which means he's pretty silky and creative with the ball at his own feet. On top of all that, he's also a helluva set-piece target for a guy under 6 feet tall.

No. 1: Jose Andres Martinez, Philadelphia Union

Following the departure of Haris Medunjanin, Philly look set to turn the defensive midfield spot over to a space-shrinking destroyer. And Martinez won't just coolly pick your pocket, he'll race it down field or hit a pillowy lead ball.

He's quick, he's surgical and he's why opponents will need to rewrite their books on the Union midfield in 2020. The days of free passage through Zone 14 in the 610 appear to be over, and their counterattacking ability is a bigger concern.

L AFC pursuing Ecuador midfielder Jose Cifuentes

TRANSFER TRACKER STATUS: Reports

L AFC appear set to add another young midfielder, as reports have surfaced that the reigning Supporters' Shield champs have signed Ecuadorian midfielder Jose Cifuentes.

The most concrete report comes from Ecuagol, an outlet reporting that Cifuentes has been acquired for $3 million on a four-year deal. Their story also includes a photo of Cifuentes posing alongside L AFC executive vice president of soccer operations and general manager John Thornington, with pen and paper in hand.

On Friday evening, the L AFC Twitter account also teased news via a hat being sent to undisclosed recipient. Often, they've done that before a signing is made.

Cifuentes, who turns 21 in March, has previously played for America de Quito and Universidad Catolica. On the international stage, Cifuentes has already earned three caps for Ecuador's senior national team and enjoyed a starring role at the 2019 FIFA U-20 World Cup. At the event, he started all seven games as La Tricolor beat Italy to finish in third place.

The move would mark L AFC's second signing from that Ecuador U-20 team, as left back Diego Palacios was transferred from Aucas last August. The U-20 World Cup has already proven fruitful for the Black & Gold, with a pair of Uruguayans also coming onboard in forward Brian Rodriguez and midfielder Francisco Ginella.

L AFC begin their Concacaf Champions League quest Feb. 18 at Club Leon, and start their 2020 MLS season March 1 against newcomers Inter Miami CF.

Gedion Zelalem signs with New York City FC after up-and-down Sporting KC season

TRANSFER TRACKER: Signing

Gedion Zelalem's time in Major League Soccer will extend through at least 2020, as New York City FC announced Saturday that they've signed the German-born American midfielder.

Zelalem arrived in MLS last year with Sporting Kansas City via a March 11 transfer from English Premier League side Arsenal, but his contract option wasn't picked up. That left the 22-year-old free to sign elsewhere.

"Gedion is a very versatile midfielder who can play across multiple positions," recently-appointed NYCFC head coach Ronny Deila said. "He's a creative player and possesses very good technique on the ball, which is vital for a midfielder in our system. He's eager to begin this preseason and we're ready for him to get into camp and show off who he is as a player."

Last year at SKC, Zelalem made just nine appearances (five starts) after joining in March.

The former US youth international is still hoping to kick his professional career into second gear, after injuries derailed his trajectory. While at Arsenal, Zelalem was also loaned to Scottish powerhouse Rangers and Dutch outfit VVV-Venlo.

"Even though [Zelalem's] still in the early portion of his career, he's gained really valuable experience at multiple clubs across a few different leagues," NYCFC sporting director David Lee said. "He's also represented the US youth national team in two World Cups, and we think we've identified a very talented player who can come in and develop with us and improve our squad."

NYCFC have already added another American midfielder this offseason, Keaton Parks, on a transfer from Benfica. Otherwise, the Eastern Conference side returns standouts such as Alexander Ring and Maxi Moralez, among others, as they prepare for a Concacaf Champions League debut Feb. 20 at AD San Carlos.

"The club has established a culture and style of play that I'm really looking forward to being a part of," Zelalem said. "I know they had a great season last year and the team will only go upwards from there. It's also a great city to live in, but mostly I'm ready to win a lot of soccer matches in 2020."

Zlatan Ibrahimovic scores first goal for AC Milan since 2012 in win over Cagliari

Zlatan Ibrahimovic wasted little time in proving he could still score in the Serie A.

The former LA Galaxy star found the net 64 minutes into his second appearance — and first start — for AC Milan, helping the Rossoneri to a 2-0 win away to Cagliari. The victory was Milan's first in more than a month in all competitions.

The goal was Ibrahimovic's first for Milan since he scored 28 times during the 2011-12 Serie A campaign, and his first in competitive action since he scored in the Galaxy's 5-3 conference semifinal loss to LAFC in the 2019 MLS Cup Playoffs on Oct. 24.

Ibrahimovic's return to Estadio San Siro began when he came on as a second-half substitute in a 0-0 home draw against Sampdoria last Monday.

What would signing Chicharito mean to LA Galaxy — on and off the field?

Following a string of reports over the years speaking of MLS interest in Chicharito, ESPN Mexico says that this time Chicharito may be just as interested in MLS.

Bummed out by a playing time situation at Sevilla that doesn't seem like it will get better, Hernandez is said to be giving the move serious thought. For an array of reasons, it should come as no shock that the purported suitor is the LA Galaxy.

Instead of discussing the likelihood of the Galaxy pulling this swoop off (who knows, right?), let's get ahead of the curve a little and think about how successful the Mexico star might actually be as a genuine MLS Designated Player signing for the five-time champs.

Bigger Than Vela?

Right off the top, his off-field impact is worth discussing.

The Galaxy have decent experience at landing El Tri names, but this would be the biggest Mexico international to ever play for the club.

In fact, as his nation's all-time leading international goal scorer, Hernandez would be a bigger Mexico coup than Carlos Vela. Think about how LAFC's profile has soared while Vela thrills the entertainment capital of the world, which just so happens to have easily the largest community of Mexicans in America. It's been amazing.

Now imagine how Los Angeles would freak out if Chicharito lined up opposite his international brother next season. Oh it would be a scene, man. They can do dueling car company commercials and everything. But fitting into the City of Angels and becoming a legit celeb will be the easy part. The hard part involves figuring out how well he can plug into this Galaxy side on the field.

The obvious question asks how Chicharito can replace Zlatan Ibrahimovic. The reality is he probably won't replicate the sheer numbers the ultra-productive departed Galaxy put up. They don't have the same methods in attack, and even at his best Hernandez has not matched Ibrahimovic's scoring track record historically. Very few in the world have.

In one facet of the attack, manager Guillermo Barros Schelotto's squad wouldn't have to change much: the Galaxy love to serve crosses into the box. Only one MLS team shipped more last season. So yeah, Chicharito will love that. There's little he enjoys more than getting loose in the area to pounce on a cross. That works for everybody.

The Conjurer and The Spy

However, they'd need to make adjustments elsewhere, starting by earning more final-third restarts. They were the least fouled team in MLS in 2019 and in the middle of the pack at winning corners.

Additionally, they'd need to use more interplay around the box, combos and through balls and what not to help Chicharito succeed.

Zlatan was a conjurer, right out in the open and often on his own, but Hernandez is a spy. If the Galaxy put him in familiar positions where he can ghost off of defenders, chances are great he'll pay off big in goals. But do they have the cogs to make the necessary alterations?

Let's start with the wide players. Aleksandar Katai has arrived to bookend Cristian Pavon, giving the Galaxy a balanced flank attack. They could win more free kicks, but there should be plenty of ground maneuvers from both wings. Finding more time for Efrain Alvarez to blossom would help LA in both areas of play.

The returning midfield trio of Joe Corona, Sebastian Lletget and Jonathon dos Santos (who knows a thing or two about causing trouble with Hernandez) are joined by fellow veteran Sacha Kljestan. Between the four of 'em, they could likely find ways to unleash Chicharito from the more central channels.

When you run through it all, perhaps the tactical transition wouldn't be that tough after all. Maybe the direction this Galaxy roster is taking has made them a team more suitable for smooth Hernandez integration.

Maybe they should just go ahead and sign him away from Sevilla so we can all find out if the Carson crew can actually win more with someone other than Zlatan as their strike ace. Wouldn't that be fun?

Canada national team complete Barbados sweep, look ahead to Iceland clash

The Canada national team made it two wins out of two on Friday night with a second friendly victory over Barbados, dismissing their Caribbean opposition 4-1 in a match played in California.

Canada have opened 2020 with back-to-back victories over Barbados, winning another friendly by the same score back on Tuesday. This time, Charles-Andreas Brym, Russell Teibert, Amer Didic and Jayden Nelson scored for the Canucks, who will step up in class when they face Iceland in another friendly on Wednesday evening.

"The players are happy with the performance as it has been a quick turnaround between games with a lot of changing faces, but the group seem to be getting stronger as we build towards the Iceland match," said Canada coach John Herdman. "We knew it was going to be a physical test and the players rose to that challenge. They maintained their commitment to attack and press which was pleasing given where many of them are at with their club seasons."

Herdman's side will need every positive result possible as they try to climb above other Concacaf teams in the FIFA World Rankings.

As of December, Canada are No. 73 in the world and seventh in Concacaf, four spots behind El Salvador. The top six Concacaf teams in the rankings as of June will automatically qualify for the hexagonal round of qualifying for the 2022 FIFA World Cup, with three automatic bids on the line.

All other Concacaf teams will play in a separate qualifying tournament, with the winner to face the fourth-place hexagonal finisher, and the winner of that playoff heading to an intercontinental playoff with a World Cup berth on the line.

Chicago Fire Interested In Nemanja Matic

Nemanja Matic has been a part of the transfer rumour mills ever since the summer transfer window. The Serbia international has not been part of Ole Gunnar Solskjaer's plans and thus many reports have been suggesting he could be leaving the club to move to either Inter Milan or Atletico Madrid.

But now another team is being mentioned in this conversation and that is Chicago Fire. Major League Soccer side have lost a couple of their Designated Players in the off-season, as Bastian Schweinsteiger and Aleksandar Katai are not their leaders anymore and Chicago have space to sign new players on big contracts.

According to the Sun, Chicago would be offering Matic around five million pounds per year, but such move looks unlikely to happen at this point in time. Man United are in need of midfielders and if Matic is to leave Old Trafford, it is more realistic to happen during the summer.
